MAJ ASA M. COOK DEAD.

Formerly Well Known to the Business Men of Boston—Had a Fine War Record.

[illegible]

READING, Jan 5—Maj Asa Merrill Cook, for nearly a score of years a resident of this town and a veteran of the civil war, died at his home, 59 Linden st, Monday evening, after an illness of two years.

Maj Cook was born in New Durham, N H, Nov 16, 1823, the son of Jacob and Keziah Hubbard Cook. The public schools of Exeter, Me, furnished his education. At the age of 19 he engaged in the lumber business in Bangor and later in Belcherstown, Mass. Subsequently he was employed by Lucius Powers & Sons, Boston, general teamsters, and when the senior Powers died, Mr Cook became a member of the firm of Powers & Cook.

He early developed a love of military affairs and shortly after becoming a resident of Boston entered the ranks of the volunteer militia. He was one of the original members of the old 1st battery formed by Moses J. Cobb. When it was attached to the 1st brigade Mr Cook was made sergeant and steadily rose in rank until he commanded the battery.

His title of major was conferred by special legislative act. In April, 1861, orders came to Maj Cook at his business office on Blackstone st, Boston, and within 24 hours he had gathered his men, purchased horses and supplies and shipped a full company.

At the end of this three-month term he returned and recruited the 80th battery, a command that saw strenuous service at the second Bull Run, Antietam, South Mountain and Chantilly.

Upon his return from war he was appointed to a position in the U S customhouse in Boston, holding this for 20 years. Leaving office he resumed the teaming business, an interest in which he had retained, and until advanced years and failing health demanded retirement was at his post of daily duty.

He was a member of the Loyal Legion of Massachusetts, of post 194 G. A. R., and of the First Baptist church here. He married Mary Wright, late of Belchertown, Oct 6, 1850. She died in 1884. Maj Cook is survived by two daughters, Mrs Arthur C. Copeland of Somerville and Miss Nellie E. Cook of Reading.

Funeral services will be held at the house Thursday at 12:45 p m.
